

Contents

Foreword Postgraduate student culture and the politics of self-help Michael A. Peters	ix
Preface and acknowledgements	xiii
Part 1 The mechanics of being a postgraduate student	1
Chapter 1 Supervision: The importance of alignments Zoë Alford	3
Chapter 2 The ethics of protection Sereana Naepi	13
Chapter 3 Auditing courses to benefit your study Gerald Pfeifer	21
Chapter 4 Not ‘viva Las Vegas!’: Preparing for the viva voce Caterina Murphy	30
Part 2 Writing and publishing: The academic apprenticeship	43
Chapter 5 The first words are always the hardest Martyn Davison	45
Chapter 6 Eating the elephant one bite at a time: Publishing as you write your thesis Christopher McMaster	56
Chapter 7 Completing a PhD by publication: A rewarding and challenging choice Ella R. Kahu	66
Chapter 8 The unspoken culture of academia: Publishing after your thesis Joce Jesson	77
Part 3 Juggling on a unicycle: Don’t fall off!	89
Chapter 9 Writing through the night: Balancing life and thesis Shirley Harris	91
Chapter 10 Pyjama party: The challenge of maintaining wellness during doctoral thesis writing Sheryl Lee Ferguson	99

Chapter 11 Working full time while studying part time Maurice Alford	113
Chapter 12 Trust yourself, oh wise person: The mature returning student Brian Marsh	122
Chapter 13 Getting it done: Facing challenges and finishing on time Christoph Teschers	133
Chapter 14 Maintaining motivation when life gets in the way Marcia Leenen-Young	143
Part 4 Tangata whenua and ngā hau e whā: Navigating culture in Aotearoa	151
Chapter 15 Multiple identities: Consideration of respectful research practices Linda Hogg	153
Chapter 16 A frangipani in the roses: Life as a Pacific postgraduate student Zoë Catherine Lavatangaloa Henry, Sam Manuela, Mary Gafaomalietoa Sapati Mocono-Kolio and Hannah Eileen Williams	168
Chapter 17 Culture and PhD supervision: A Samoan perspective Esther Cowley-Malcolm	180
Chapter 18 The PhD voyage: Insights from a first-year African sailor Edward Okai	188
Chapter 19 Studying at a Western university: An Asian perspective Azizah Binti Mohd Zahidi	199
Chapter 20 From China to Aotearoa New Zealand and back Xiaomin Jiao	209
Chapter 21 Crossing borders: Writing in a second language Mohammad Shamsuzzaman	219
About the contributors	229
Index	235