Contents

About the authors vii
Introduction 1
Chapter 1
Te Whäriki: Historical accounts and contemporary influences 1990–2012 7
Sarah Te One
Introduction 8
Part One: Contexts for the development of Te Whäriki 8
Part Two: Writing Te Whäriki 12
Part Three: Te Whäriki in 2012 21
Conclusion 29
Chapter 2
Tōku Rangatiratanga nā te Mana Mātauranga: “Knowledge and Power Set Me Free ...” 35
Tilly Reedy
Their horizon, my heritage 36
A tangata whenua perspective of early learning 38
For some indoctrination took place before they were born ... 39
But what about today? 42
Dimensions of the learner 46
Ngā Taumata Whakahirahira 47
Conclusion 49
Chapter 3
Teu Le Va: A cultural knowledge paradigm for Pasifika early childhood education in Aotearoa New Zealand 55
Diane Mara
Introduction 56
Research from the 1990s 57
Metaphors and paradigms: The situating of knowledge in Pasifika research 59
Barriers to articulation of Pasifika knowledge in the ECE sector 60
Teu Le Va and Te Whäriki 61
Creating spaces within the va for Pasifika early childhood curriculum and pedagogies 62
Spirituality in the early childhood holistic curriculum 64
Spirituality and implications for pedagogy 65
Implications for Pasifika ECE 66
Conclusion: Looking towards the future of Pasifika knowledge and pedagogy 66
Chapter 4
Improvement, accountability and sustainability:
A comparison of developments in the early childhood and schooling sectors

Carol Mutch and Bev Trim

- Introduction
- The theoretical framework underpinning this chapter
- Wave 1: The improvement wave
- Wave 2: The accountability wave
- Wave 3: The sustainability wave
- Where to from here?
- Conclusion

Chapter 5
Coming of age?: Infants and toddlers in curriculum

Jayne White and Carl Mika

- Introduction
- Te Whāriki’s positioning of infants and toddlers
- Challenges and opportunities for infant and toddler pedagogy

Chapter 6
Progressing Te Whāriki from rhetoric to reality for children with disabilities and their families

Bernadette Macartney, Kerry Purdue and Jude MacArthur

- Introduction
- Perspectives of disabled people and their families/whānau
- Inclusive education as a framework for thinking about curriculum, teaching and learning in early childhood
- Barriers to inclusion: Tensions and dilemmas
- Tools for progressing change: Putting inclusive values and concepts into practice
- The role of teacher education programmes in preparing teachers for inclusion
- Conclusion

Chapter 7
Te Whāriki and the promise of early childhood care and education grounded in a commitment to *Te Tiriti o Waitangi

Jenny Ritchie

- Introduction
- Te Whāriki as promise
- Te Whāriki as challenge
- Te Whāriki as inspiration
- Te Whāriki as transformative
- Concluding thoughts

Chapter 8
Te Whāriki and assessment: A case study of teacher change

Karen Ramsey, Wendy Lee and Margaret Carr

- Introduction
- Teacher change and professional development
- The Education Leadership Project
- The focus on assessment practices within the ELP
- Karen’s story
Teacher change and teacher research 168
Centre of Innovation, 2003–2006 169
Participation in a Teaching and Learning Research Initiative project 171
Conclusion 172

Chapter 9
Curriculum concepts as cultural tools: Implementing Te Whāriki 177
Joce Nuttall
Introduction 178
Theoretical framing: The role of cultural tools in socio-cultural theory 179
The research methodology 181
The influence of initial teacher education on the co-construction of curriculum 183
The influence of curriculum knowledge on the co-construction of curriculum 186
Definitions of what counts as curriculum as an influence on curriculum enactment 188
Practical constraints on the co-construction of enacted curriculum 190
Conclusion: Strategies for exploring curriculum co-construction within socio-cultural pedagogy 191

Chapter 10
Te Whāriki: Weaving multiple perspectives on transitions 197
Sally Peters and Vanessa Paki
Introduction 198
Understanding the transition to school 198
Two decades of curriculum development 199
Curriculum alignment through the key competencies 201
Curriculum alignment through working theories and learning areas 202
Māori voices and understandings 210
Weaving together multiple perspectives 210
Conclusion 211

Chapter 11
Theoretical plurality in curriculum design: The many voices of Te Whāriki and the Early Years Learning Framework 217
Marilyn Fleer
Introduction 218
Methodological note 220
Te Whāriki beyond its time: the importance of kaupapa Māori 220
The challenges of bicultural voices in Aotearoa New Zealand 222
Theoretical plurality embedded in curricula in Aotearoa New Zealand and Australia 225
Theoretical plurality in early childhood curriculum in Australia 230
Conclusion 233

Chapter 12
Understanding Te Whāriki from a Danish perspective 239
Stig Brostrøm
Introduction 240
A critical preschool Didaktik 243
Te Whāriki considered in the light of a range of Didaktik (curriculum theoretical) models 250
Conclusion 253
Chapter 13
Contested concepts in educational play: A comparative analysis of early childhood policy frameworks in New Zealand and England

Elizabeth Wood
Introduction
Methods
Key concepts in educational play: the Early Years Foundation Stage
Key concepts in educational play: Te Whāriki
Play as learning
Play as curriculum
Play as pedagogy
Conclusion: Finding a best fit between play in policy and practice

Chapter 14
The future of Te Whāriki: Political, pedagogical and professional concerns

Helen Hedges
Introduction
Play in educational provision
Professional knowledge
Participatory learning theories
Subject content knowledge
Holistic outcomes
Challenges for teacher education and professional learning
Realising the potential of Te Whāriki
Conclusion and policy implications

Index